Fighting poverty through trade

June 2022

MADE 51

There are almost 80 million people forcibly displaced worldwide. When refugees flee they carry traditions, skills and craftsmanship with them. Partnering with the World Fair Trade Organisation (WFTO), MADE51 ensures that the principles of fair trade are being met by the social enterprises. Many areas are assessed, including fair wages, good working conditions and no child labour. A crucial element of MADE51 is being able to scale up and incorporate as many refugees as possible within the artisan value chain; from raw materials processing to crafting to logistical arrangements. Refugees are eager to get involved and be productive contributors. MADE51's ability to scale up depends on buyer and customers. When orders are received and buyers commit to long-term sourcing arrangements, the social enterprises can increase the number of producers and grow. Every product purchased is an investment into the future of these refugees and MADE51 provides refugee artisans with a means to market their crafts worldwide. By collaborating with a global network of social enterprises, not only does MADE51 provide refugees around the world with a sustainable livelihood, but it also helps keep traditional craftsmanship alive and celebrates long-held artistic traditions. In the making of these products, refugees are given a way to earn an income, and the opportunity to rebuild their livelihoods and establish independence. Traidcraft are delighted to offer some of the products available in their range so please do look at some of the products on the Traidcraft website, or in the catalogue or give me a call. There are some delightful embroidered, handwoven or block printed scarves, jewellery and ornaments.
